INTRODUCTION.

Dear Classmates:

For the fourth time it is the privilege and pleasure of your class secretary to place before you the result of your reports, and the tabulations therefrom. It is with sincere regret that I realize that over a year has elapsed since the majority of these reports were made to me, but the duty has come upon me at a time when I have been pressed with work which could not be pushed aside even for a class report, and the labor of editing the report has been so considerable, and is so exacting, that it could not easily be done piecemeal, and has had to wait its opportunity. For this delay I offer my apology to you, craving at the same time your patience and forbearance. I shall endeavor, in future reports, to make such arrangements as will prevent so great a delay. In this the labor may be much lightened, and the time shortened, by a careful observance of the requests made for information, and the methods to be followed in imparting the same.

Since the last report we have successfully passed our first decennial road stone. The class album has appeared, and arrangements made for welcoming at our gatherings such special students who were with us at Cambridge as may choose to avail themselves of the privileges. The class fund still languishes, owing to many unpaid subscriptions, and the album committee are still in debt, with many copies of a beautiful class and college souvenir still on their hands — also a result of unpaid subscriptions. Of all of these matters I have endeavored to treat more fully in the body of the report, under the class history.

Again the class has met with sad loss, in the deaths of Fisk and Lane, and, quite recently, of W. B. Noble and Tilton. The life of each has taught its lesson, and although we remaining must press on without them, we can do so the better and feel the stronger for having had them with us, and learned from them something of the duties and nobility of life and its labor.

Again attention is called to the advantages of the Harvard Graduates' Magazine, both to the University and to us individuals as a means of Harvard intercommunication, and of my willingness to communicate to the editors any changes of address, and other facts of importance and interest to members that occur between the dates of our class reports, that may be sent me. The magazine needs the subscriptions and support of all true Harvard men if it is to maintain its present position of influence and success.

Next June (1897) we come around to our fourth triennial dinner at the expense of the class fund, so I am looking forward to meeting a good number of you then.

Ever yours faithfully,

HENRY M. WILLIAMS.

RECORD OF THE CLASS.

1892–1895.

VICTOR CLIFTON ALDERSON.

"I was elected professor of mathematics in the Armour Institute, Chicago, in January, 1893. My wife died September 25 ,1893." Report is brought to the secretary that the present high standing and success of the Armour Institute is largely due to the ability, energy, and character of Alderson and some of his coadjutors who are the controlling force in the management.

RICHARD ALDRICH.

"Since the secretary made his last call for facts, I have continued to live in New York city, engaged upon the editorial staff of the 'New York Tribune.' The occupation of the journalist is probably as absorbing as any in which human beings are engaged; for this reason, I have little or nothing to add to a mere statement of my occupation, which in itself is an implication that I have had no time to do anything else, not even to get married. My special duties were those of assistant to the night editor on the telegraph desk till April, 1893, when I was made exchange editor, which post I have since occupied, varied with seasons as acting assistant to the day editor, contributor to the editorial columns, and (frequently during the musical season) assistant to the musical critic. With the latter (Mr. H. E. Krehbiel), I collaborated on a book called 'The Philharmonic Society, A Memorial,' being a history of that society, published at its fiftieth anniversary in April, 1892, in New York."

ARTHUR LINCOLN ALLEN.*

Born September 28, 1863, in West Cambridge (now Arlington), Mass. Died May 16, 1892, at Arlington.

See Report III., page 9.

HORACE DAVID ARNOLD.

"My story continues uneventful. Up to June 1, 1892, I continued at the Boston City Hospital, thus completing a service of two years as assistant superintendent. On June 8, 1892, I was married, and early in July began to practise in Roxbury. While I have nothing extraordinary to record, I am doing well, and am well satisfied with my success so far." Is one of the medical inspectors of schools for the city of Boston.

CHARLES HEATH ATKINSON.

Is out of health. No report.

CLARENCE WALTER AYER.

"After finishing the college year of 1891–92 at Cambridge, as a special assistant in English at the college, as a member of the Graduate School, and as a private tutor of preparatory work, I accepted an appointment for the next year as acting professor of English at Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio. One year there was followed by a transfer to my present position in the same line of work at the college for women of Western Reserve University, Cleveland. The summer of 1893 was spent in foreign travel, which took me over much ground, from Scotland on the north, to Italy on the south. Last summer found me again abroad, engaged in visiting, on my bicycle, places and people of literary and other interest, chiefly in the west and south of England and in Wales." Is now in Boston.

WILLIAM FRANCIS BACON.

Is a lawyer in Boston, and a director in several business corporations.

STEPHEN ARNOLD BAILEY.

"Since January, 1892, my place of residence has continued to be in Telluride, Col., and my occupation the practice of law. On May 27, 1894, I was married to Cornelia Ellen Parker, daughter of Charles Edward and Isabella Graham Parker, of Auburndale, Mass. No other event in my life during this period seems worthy of being chronicled."

WILLIAM HENRY BALDWIN, Jr.

Remained at Saginaw, Mich., as general manager, Flint & Pere Marquette Railroad Company until July, 1894. Since then, third vice-president Southern Railway Company, Washington, D.C. "The above suggests where I have been — always on the move. Nothing particular has happened, except constant good fortune and happiness." Later, second vice-president of the same road. Has just resigned latter position and been elected to succeed the late Austin Corbin as president of the Long Island Railroad. Editorial and other newspaper comments of Baldwin and of his success have been most flattering. The two following may not be out of place here. One paper, saying that "they don't hate all Yankees down South," quotes these words from the "Atlanta Constitution." "Although he has been with the company only two years, the great army of men in its employ has become deeply attached to him. It really amounts to affection." And "Harper's Weekly" has an illustrated comment in which it says, "Persons who still cling to the old fogy idea that a college education unfits a man for the practical concerns of business are invited to remark the unusually rapid progress of Mr. W. H. Baldwin, Jr., who was lately chosen to succeed Mr. Austin Corbin as president of the Long Island Railway. . . . His special strength is in his capacity as an organizer, and in his ability to deal with railroad employees. Judging from his career, the maxim about the rolling stone seems not to apply to the railroad business, whereof, to be sure, the whole profit lies in swift and timely locomotion." That in the rush of his great railroad interests, Baldwin does not forget his college and class, is illustrated by the list of Harvard Clubs he has belonged to in each locality that he has dwelt in, and by the following extract from a personal letter to the secretary, relating to preparations for the decennial dinner: "I had an invitation to go to England with a committee of four others, to represent the American railways at an International convention, and I gave up this trip largely to attend the dinner. I think it is going to be very important for us all to do our best to get as many as possible to attend. I wish you would let me know if there are any persons you wish me to communicate with to urge them to attend."

HENRY BARTLETT.

"The time since January 1, 1892, has been most pleasantly passed in the busy field of railroad life. Spent two most valuable weeks at the World's Fair at Chicago, as a representative of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company; sent there to examine into and report on the mechanical devices at that exhibit. Left the position of assistant superintendent of motive power of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company January 1, 1895, to assume the duties of superintendent of motive power of the Boston & Maine Railroad system, with headquarters in the large Union station of that company in Boston."

STEPHEN SMITH BARTLETT.

"Since January 1, 1892, I have been practising law in Boston. In the summer of 1893 I spent a few weeks in England with George R. Nutter of our class."

FERDINAND WINTHROP BATCHELDER.

Has been in business in Ponca, Oklahoma, and later in Boston.

LORING WOART BATTEN.

"I have not been anywhere much, except at home and business, and very little has happened to me except the loss of my eldest child on February 23, 1893. Life, however, has not been monotonous. I have been relieved of all duties except those belonging to my chair, and am gladly concentrating in my one field, hoping I may sometime know something about the Hebrew language and the Old Testament. I am preserving the reputation I had in the good old college days of being something of a steady worker. I shall not, however, become a dull boy for lack of play, for I have resumed my old custom of stealing away now and again for a few days afield with gun and dog. I have had some rare days in the mountains of Pennsylvania after ruffed grouse, and in the South after quail. I would not have mentioned this here, but I notice that there is not the same publicity given to my hunting trips as to those of a fellow sportsman whom some of our class helped to elect president in 1884."

The "chair" referred to above is the professorial chair of Old Testament Literature and Languages in the Philadelphia Divinity School, to which he was chosen in 1891. Was made a Ph.D. by the University of Pennsylvania in 1893.

HARRY CLAYTON BEAMAN.

"I haven't been around the world, and I haven't been elected president, but am very well contented." Which means that he has remained engaged in his successful hotel business at Princeton, and another son has come to grace the family. Stood for state senator on the Democratic ticket, and although defeated ran ahead of his ticket in a strong Republican district.

JOHN WHEELER BEMIS.

"After knocking about for a little over a year, I was married June 1, 1893, to Leslie L. Fisher at Weston, Mass., where we lived for six months, then moving to Jamaica Plain. Of course we visited the World's Fair at Chicago.

"I have had a little practice as an architect on my own account the past year, but find it very slow beginning, and the appointment as assistant to Professor Warren this year past in the new Architectural Department of the Scientific School at Harvard came very acceptably.

"This is an entirely new department, and consequently not at all what it is hoped it will be in the future. A beginning has been made, however, and the thirty odd men who are taking the first-year course speak very well for what is expected of Harvard in this branch of study. It is hoped that the course will fully keep up the high standard already set by the university, and take its proper rank among the best schools of architecture in this country and abroad, adding new laurels to Harvard's fair fame. To bring the department to its full development needs decidedly more than the good will of Harvard graduates.

"This last year has brought great changes to my private life in the birth of a little daughter, and also in the death of my father, both happening within a short time of each other."

ROBERT SLOAN BICKFORD.

"In the summer of 1892 I had the Western fever, and on August 7, with my penates, I started westward. After several weeks spent in Chicago, visiting my old chum Alderson, I went to Duluth and joined a Cornell friend, W. M. Roberts, 1883. After a short stop in that progressive city, we visited St. Paul, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake, San Francisco, Portland, and other cities in the Northwest, reaching Helena about the first of November. I met quite a number of Harvard men in San Francisco, and intended to be present at the annual banquet of the Harvard Club, but we had to leave before the time fixed for the gathering. Soon after reaching Helena I went over to Butte, 'the greatest mining camp on earth,' and presented some letters of introduction sent me by W. H. Baldwin of our class. If any of you ever go to Butte, just mention the fact that you are a friend of "Billy" Baldwin, and you will not be lonesome for a minute in that town. Within a week I had secured the position of private secretary to Governor-elect J. E. Rickards, and was soon offered a partnership in his real-estate business in Helena. A provision in the state constitution, however, prevented me from securing final appointment as private secretary, as only residents of the state can hold appointive offices. The governor secured for me the position of chief clerk of the land department, and I am still holding that position.

"I have been East three times since coming to Montana, the third trip being for the purpose of being married. I met my fiancée, Miss Ethel Rummell of Chicago, at New York, September 1, 1894, on her return from Europe, and we were married in New York a few days later.

"I was much interested in the last Class Report, and read it through from cover to cover. One thing impressed me strongly, and that was the number of men who have been seriously ill since leaving college. Ours was the champion athletic class, and yet nearly one third of the men reporting state that they have been afflicted with protracted illnesses. Why is this? Can some statistician ferret out a reason? I am glad and thankful to be able to report excellent health since 1885, having lost only four or five days from business during that time.

"Wish I might be at the class dinner next June, but that will be impossible."

Has recently returned to Boston and is in the mortgage and investment securities business at 53 State street.

FRANKLIN SWIFT BILLINGS.

"I have continued in the exporting and importing business in the firm of Swift, Billings & Company, New York city. I was married on July 12, 1892, to Miss Bessie H. Vail of New York, and we have one daughter." University and Harvard Clubs.

CHARLES WESLEY BIRTWELL.

Is still engaged in his work of general secretary of the Boston Children's Aid Society, and most prominent in the charitable work of aiding children. Among the more important positions held by him in pursuing this work are membership on the committee on the Massachusetts Exhibit of Charities and Correction at the World's Columbian Exposition, and secretaryship of the section on Children of the International Congress of Charities, Correction, and Philanthropy held at Chicago in 1893, and the chairmanship of the section on Children of the 22d National Conference of Charities and Correction held in New Haven, May, 1895. He was married in Hampton Falls, N.H., on October 16, 1894.

GEORGE RICHARD BLINN.

"I am still practising law in Boston as a member of the firm of Adams & Blinn."

ABNER ZAZA BOWEN.

Has been in the brokerage business in Chicago, and is interested in exploiting gold mines and other large corporate enterprises.

FRANK JOSHUA BOWMAN.

Has not reported. Lawyer at Sterling, Ill.

ROLAND WILLIAM BOYDEN.

"I have been working steadily at the law in Boston since the last report; in partnership with Charles I. Giddings, '87, until his death in August, 1893; alone from that time till August, 1894, and since then in the firm of Ropes, Gray & Loring."

CARLETON BRABROOK.

Has been engaged with the manufacturing concern of Reed & Barton; was married October 11, 1894.

MARTIN LUTHER BRADFORD, Jr.*

Born November 6, 1861, in Dorchester (now Boston), Mass. Died June 27, 1887, at Boston.

See Report II., page 17.

CHARLES FRANKLIN BRANDT.

Lawyer, Brooklyn, N.Y.

WILLIAM FREDERICK BRIDGE.*

Born January 12, 1861, in Dublin, N.H. Died May 21, 1889, at Foster's, Ohio. See Report III., page 16.

FREDERICK HARRIS BRIGGS.*

Born July 13, 1862, in Springfield, Mass. Died October 6, 1890, at New York, N.Y.

See Report III., page 17.

HUGH HENRY BROGAN.

"After spending a year as instructor in physics at Washington University, St. Louis, I returned to Cambridge, where I have been tutoring for the past two years, at the same time attending the Law School."

ARTHUR LANGMAID CALHOUN.

"January 1, 1892, saw me a reporter on the Tacoma, Wash., 'Daily Ledger.' The long hours and hard work of newspaper work in the West forced me out, and I secured a position teaching in the Tacoma High School. From this work I was called home to St. John, N.B., owing to the failure of my father's health, to manage his corn-milling business. This was in July, 1894, and the only change since has been my becoming a member of the firm of Fowler & Calhoun, corn-meal manufacturers and grain dealers."

FREDERIC IVES CARPENTER.

"At University of Chicago since its opening in the fall of 1892, as graduate student, fellow, and (at present) docent in English. Summer vacations spent camping in northern Michigan with Hansen and Holland of the class. Having just taken my Ph.D. degree, I am enjoying a winter vacation of three months in travel in California."

CHARLES FREDERIC CARRIER.

"Since January 1, 1892, I have been engaged in the practice of law in Santa Barbara, Cal., being the junior member of the firm of Richards & Carrier. Nothing has occurred during this period worthy to be chronicled."

JOHN DERTHICK CARY.

"To those of the class who know me I can say only that I am stumbling along in the same old ruts; to those who know me not, my life would be very uninteresting. The election of '93 wound up my public duties. An occasional convention or banquet are the principal variations from prosy business."

ARTHUR PATTERSON CHADBOURNE.

After returning from Europe, settled down in Boston, hanging out his shingle as an M.D. at 225 Marlborough street. Is an assistant at the Harvard Medical School.

ALLEN HOWARD CHAMBERLAIN.

"Have not been a hundred miles from home since January 1, 1892.

"Have met with a fair degree of success in the practice of my profession in my native town, where I have resided since the summer of 1891.

WINTHROP ASTOR CHANLER.

Lives at Tuxedo. Is president of the United Industrial Company of New York, and treasurer of the Bachelor of Arts Publishing Company.

THOMAS HERBERT CHASE.

"My life for the past three years has been very uneventful. In February of this year I moved from New York to Providence, R.I., where I would be delighted to welcome and compare notes with any member of the class."

HORACE CLARK.

"I came to Buffalo, N.Y., in the summer of 1892, and engaged in the special practice of Laryngology and Rhinalogy, meeting with unhoped-for success. I was soon appointed attending surgeon at the Charity Eye, Ear, and Throat Hospital of Erie county."

LEONARD BROWN CLARK.

"I am still in Waverly, and nothing of special interest has happened to me outside of the usual routine of everyday practice." Practising physician, Waverly, Mass.

JOHN CODMAN, 2d.

"Since the last Class Report I have married. My wife, Caroline Morton, is a daughter of the late Dr. Charles E. Briggs of St. Louis, Mo. The marriage was in that city, April 4, 1894.

"On February 13, 1895, Mrs. Codman presented me with a daughter, because I swear by boys. As many officious friends took pains to inform me at the time, the sultana of Turkey had just practised the same joke on the sultan, and the sultan had to make the best of it. So have I.

"The real-estate business still claims me for its own, and I find it worse than an Egyptian for a taskmaster. Then, too, hard times have brought about a plague of real-estate brokers, and it hurts one's pride to be one of a plague. I should recommend all young men to keep out of it, and leave what little there is left in it to me.

"I thought I foresaw this condition of affairs three or four years ago, and proceeded to hedge by studying law during my evenings, and have just passed the Suffolk county bar examination, and expect to be duly admitted within a few days. But time and acquaintance have led me now to believe that for a man of genius there is less in law than real estate, so I think I shall continue in the pursuit of the 'almighty dollar' instead of the pursuit of law. In later years, should I amass a competency for myself, my family, my great, and "great-great" grandchildren, etc., the fashionable stopping point in this century, I may be able to learn something about real property law which will be of advantage to my clients in the care of their estates, or enough to keep whatever I may have accumulated out of the clutches of my legal brethren.

"I have had as yet no more adventures with politics than as one of that numerous body, the Democratic city committee.

"I have the honor to be a corporal in the First Mass. Cavalry, Troop A. I have ceased to be a member of the Athletic and Puritan Clubs, and have become a member of the Exchange Club and the Somerset.

"None of my experiences would probably be of value to the class, unless it may be matrimony, which I heartily recommend to the few poor, miserable bachelors of the class of 1885."

NATHAN EMERY COFFIN.

"Nothing but remained here (Des Moines, Iowa) and practised law."

ALLANIAH DAVIS COLE.

"I am still engaged in the practice of law at Maysville, Ky., having on January 1, 1893, become a member of the firm of A. E. Cole & Sons.

"On May 14, 1892, I was united in marriage, at Hardinsburg, Ky., to Clara Vivian, daughter of Rev. David A. and Anna Mary Beardsley. On the twenty-seventh anniversary of my birth, March 16, 1893, our union was blessed with a daughter, Thirza Vivian. But on September 21, 1893, my dear wife died of quick consumption, and in January following my little darling went to her."

EDWARD LYON COLLINS.

Has not reported. Present address and whereabouts unknown.

JOHN JOSLIN COLONY.

"Most of the time has been spent at home, here in Keene, where I am still interested in the manufacture of woollen goods. With the exception of a term in the New Hampshire Legislature, have lived the life of a quiet and law-abiding citizen."

WINTHROP COWDIN.

"After serving a clerkship of three years, I founded, in 1889, in conjunction with E. LeB. Gardiner and M. P. Slade, (Harvard, '81), The Algonquin Company, a woollen mill at Passaic, N.J. I am its treasurer, and have been since its incorporation. I have made no changes in my business relations. I take great interest in a farm in Westchester county, and Troop A, N.G. N.Y., both of which afford me much pleasure."

HENRY BRINTON COXE, Jr.

"Absolutely nothing unusual." Is engaged as formerly in the wholesale coal business at Philadelphia.

GEORGE ARTHUR CRAIGIN.

"Most of my time has been devoted to professional work, including duties at the Children's Hospital, House of the Good Samaritan, and, of late, teaching in the Harvard Medical School, and inspection of schools for the Board of Health. A summer practice at Beach Bluff, Mass., has broken the monotony of city life. On October 23, 1894, I was married to Miss Louise Gray Fraser."

ADAMS CROCKER.

"I have led a busy yet uneventful life, and am still a manufacturer of textile fabrics." Lotus Club, New York; University Club, Boston.

HAMILTON ROWAN CURTIS.

Has changed his residence to "The Charlesgate," Boston. Is not in any business or profession.

GRAFTON DULANY CUSHING.

Is teaching at Groton School; has spent his summers at Newport or in Europe.

GEORGE FAUNTLEROY DAVIDSON.

"Gave up farming in September, 1892. From November, 1893, to May, 1894, in New York in hands of a well-known oculist. Do nothing but kill time. Never have a waking moment free from pain or strain. Don't know what decent sleep is. A complete nervous wreck for the past eight years. What I don't know about the new theory of eye balance and eye strains is not worth knowing. Boys, look to your own and your children's eyes. You owe it to yourself and them. My poor eyes, and the work I put upon them, were the cause of my undoing."

BANCROFT GHERARDI DAVIS.

"Since the secretary's last report I have been living in Cambridge, and practising law in Boston; have also been in the employ of the reporter of decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, and have assisted the reporter of decisions of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts in the preparation of volumes 153 to 156 inclusive, of the Massachusetts Law Reports; am unmarried. Took a short trip to Europe in the summer of 1892, but apart from that my time has been spent in attending to my business, and nothing of interest has happened to me."

FREDERIC ADRIAN DELANO.

"I can add very little to what has been said in previous class reports. I have stuck to my railroad work, and although, after nearly ten years, I can boast no very high position, I can certainly say that I have not regretted the choice I have made. In June, 1894, I had six weeks in Great Britain, studying the railway systems there, and this was the pleasantest as well as the longest recreation I have had since I first got my nose in close proximity to the 'grindstone.'"

PAUL SHIPMAN DRANE.

Has not reported. Last address, New York city.

WILLIAM KINNICUTT DRAPER.

"Since January, 1892, I have been settled in New York, practising medicine."

THEODORE DUNHAM.

Physician in active practice in New York city. Is one of the staff of the Post Graduate Hospital.

PERCY DAVID DWIGHT.

"I spent 1894 in Europe, part of the time at the Azores, Northern Africa, and on the Continent. Since my return, have given up the practice of the law, and have started a manufacturing plant for the making of knit woollen goods."

EDWARD TYLER EDGERLY.

"The first two years of this period were taken up with the duties incident to private practice and my position in the Medical Department of Northwestern University, where I was connected with the department of Internal Medicine. From February to November, 1893, I was in the medical department of the World's Columbian Exposition, being on duty three or four hours each day. In May, 1894, my father, J. W. Edgerly (Harvard, '55), on account of ill health, on the advice of consultants, went to Europe for recreation and to try Carlsbad. I accompanied him as companion and attendant. While he was at Carlsbad I took a course in diagnosis in Vienna. My father died suddenly of apoplexy in Paris in August, and on my return I found I was one of his executors under his will, and the duties requiring much of my time I removed my family to my old home, Ottumwa, Ia. Gradually taking up some of the duties of my father in the wholesale drug house of J. W. Edgerly & Company, when articles of incorporation were taken out in January, I was elected treasurer, and for 1895, at least, shall be out of the practice of medicine."

JAMES LYMAN FISKE.*

Was born in Cambridge, June 24, 1862. He was the eldest son of James Chaplin Fiske of Cambridge, and Mary Grant (Daniell) Fiske. He fitted for college at Mr. Noble's school in Boston, entered college in the fall of 1881, and graduated in 1885.

Soon after entering college, his health became seriously impaired, and during his whole college course he labored under great disadvantage; but he persisted in his work, and took his degree with the class in the spring of 1885.

His cheerfulness and courage, and his determination not to let his physical condition interfere with the success of his life, prevented all but his most intimate friends from fully realizing the great disadvantage under which he labored, and the courage and strength of character which he displayed.

Soon after graduating he left Cambridge and went to Saranac, in the hope that the change and a long vacation might prove beneficial; but in the following December his father's sudden death called him home and placed new responsibilities upon him, which he felt that he must assume.

He entered the office of the Fiskdale Mills, in which his family are largely interested, and was made president of the corporation, which position he held until his death.

It was almost entirely owing to his efforts that the class album was published. He had a strong class feeling, and was greatly interested in this work, devoting much time to perfecting it. It took several years to procure all the necessary material, and required a vast amount of correspondence. This work was practically finished before his death, and is one for which his classmates will always hold him in grateful remembrance.

Since his death, many acts of kindness on his part have come to my knowledge, which I do not feel it right or fitting to record here. Still I do feel that I should say that it was owing to his aid that several others were enabled to go through with their college course, and as far as lay in his power, he was always ready and willing to aid others.

He was of a cheerful, affectionate nature. A man of much business ability, and a true and loyal friend.

He died suddenly of acute meningitis on July 17, 1893, while boating with two of his classmates on the Sudbury river.

W.R.T.

FRANCIS BRINLEY FOGG.

"Have been on a constant hustle to keep above water. Manager Melrose Stock Farm, and general manager Duck River Phosphate Company."

GEORGE EDMUND FOSS.

"Nothing of special importance. Spent the summer of '92 abroad." Behold the extreme modesty of our classmate in the above simple sketch. He was married in 1893, and in 1894 was elected to Congress as a Republican to represent the seventh Illinois district by a clear majority of 8067 votes. Recently renominated by acclamation.

SAMUEL LYNDE FOSTER.

"Since January, 1892, little has happened to or been done by me that can be of interest to my classmates. I am at present the electrical engineer of the Market Street Railway Company, a corporation that controls ninety per cent of the street railways of San Francisco, and that is now engaged in changing something over one hundred and thirty miles of horse and cable roads into electric roads."

AMOS TUCK FRENCH.

"Since the last Class Report I have been living at Tuxedo during the nights, and at the corner of Wall and Nassau streets,

New York, during the days. I am second vice-president of the Manhattan Trust Company, and a director thereof. In September, 1893, I was appointed a trustee for the United States branch of the Nederland Life Insurance Company of Amsterdam, Holland. I advise all my classmates to get their lives insured. The rates are low, and the post-mortem proceeds to one's friends are more enlivening than the whiskey at the wake."

Was in 1895 elected a director and the treasurer of the reorganized New York & New England Railroad Company, now known as the New England Railroad.

JOHN HAYS GARDINER.

"At the end of some desultory private tutoring in the winter of 1891–92, I was, in June, 1892, appointed instructor in English in the college for a year. My work was in English composition, in the required sophomore themes, and as assistant to Mr. Barrett Wendell in his course, English 12. The next year I was reappointed with the same work, and last May (1894) the appointment was made permanent, and I became a member of the Faculty. This year my work is the same, except that, in Mr. Wendell's absence in his sabbatical year, I am in charge of English 12. My long holidays I have spent quietly in Maine, and in winter I still live in Longwood, going to Cambridge every day."

CHARLES FREEMAN GILMAN.

Same occupation and address as in last report; in the Treasury Department of the United States, at the Boston Custom House.

CHARLES BERTIE GLEASON.

Has taught school in Southern California, at Redlands, all the time between 1892 and 1895. Has now moved to Berkeley, Cal.

JOHN MacGREGOR GOODALE.

"I have practised law in New York city since 1892, in the office of Arnoux, Ritch & Woodford. McArthur, '85, is in the same office. Outside of the law, I have been connected with various citizens' associations, in which Paulding of our class has generally taken part."

ROBERT STETSON GORHAM.

"I am still practising law in Boston, and living at West Newton. January 1, 1894, I became a partner in the firm of Ropes, Gray & Loring at 50 State street, Boston, for which I had previously been managing clerk. Boyden joined our firm in August, 1894, so we are together as much as we were in college days. My work has been varied and interesting, though not very eventful, and I feel that, so far, I have no reason to grumble at fate. As stated in my previous report, I am married, and our one child, Tom, is now nearly four years old."

WALTER FOLGER GREENMAN.

"Since the last report, I have been continuing my work as minister in the First Parish Unitarian Church at Fitchburg, Mass. Besides the work always done in a parish, I have had charge of study classes in English literature, including English and American novelists, Emerson and Browning, also in English composition. Outside the church, I have had charge of converting an old-fashioned benevolent society into an Associated Charity Bureau. Of this organization, called the Benevolent Union, I am one of the Board of Directors, Chairman of the Executive Committee, and President of the Friendly Visitors' Conference. Last winter we had seventy visitors. I am also one of the directors of the Worcester Unitarian Conference, and, as Chairman of the Missionary Committee, have made addresses in nearly all the churches of the Unitarian denomination in Worcester county; in some of them many times. I am also a director of the National Bureau of Unity Clubs.

"My summers are spent at my summer house at the lake, in Harvard, Mass., where any of my friends of '85 may be sure of a very cordial welcome. I am a member of the Fitchburg College Association and the Fitchburg Athletic Club; also the Worcester Association of Ministers."

FRED SUMNER HAINES.

"I know of nothing that has occurred to me in the past three years that would be of interest to my classmates, except, perhaps, the fact that I have two sons growing up, who, from their size, build, and generally healthy condition, are almost eligible to a position on the Harvard football team, and who may in time become candidates for such positions, provided that in the mean time, if the game is not 'outlawed,' the beastly features of it are eliminated."

Is in the life-insurance business at Rochester, Minn.

WALTER ALLEN HALBERT.

"I have continued as appraiser of real estate for the bond and mortgage department of an insurance company. The field of my work has widened somewhat. It has extended to the city of Washington on the east, to Galveston on the south, to Tacoma on the west, and to Duluth on the north. I have opened a small office in Chicago, but my home is in Kansas City.

"I regret that I am not able to report that I have accomplished some piece of work which might be regarded as worthy of a place in the history of our class. I have written nothing, and have held no office. All the energy and industry that I have been able to command have been given to the study of the investment of money for income. Incidentally I have had an opportunity to learn more or less about our country."

WILLIAM ALEXANDER HAMMOND.

Is still assistant professor of Ancient and Mediæval Philosophy at Cornell, to which position he was elected in 1892. He was married at Philadelphia on December 12, 1893, and has one son, born at Ithaca.

OTTO RHEINHARD HANSEN.

"Since January, 1892, my occupation and residence have not changed. I am still engaged in practising law at Milwaukee. The humdrum of life is broken by an occasional trip to Chicago or New York, and by a few weeks' outing in the northern woods in the summer time. These occasions always bring me into contact with some of our classmates, and therefore seem noteworthy to me, for at Milwaukee there are no other members of the class of '85."

CHARLES MATHER HARRINGTON.

"Since previous report I have simply continued the practice of my profession as an attorney at law. I am located at Buffalo, N.Y., my present address being 32–34 Hazen Building, at which place I should be pleased to see any of my classmates whenever they may happen to come to Buffalo. There seem to be none of them living in the immediate vicinity, and the memory of their faces is growing altogether too dim. I did see, for a brief time, John P. Fay, who was in our class for a year or two, and was on his way from Seattle to New York city. He seemed to be thriving, and, like myself, he is the father of a growing family. Also, about a year ago, I had the pleasure of seeing Goodale and Simpson, both of whom are practising law in New York city. And then, too, I had, not long since, a delightful call at my home from our former secretary, Walter Halbert, who is now in Chicago holding an important position with the New York Life Insurance Company. The intervening years have dealt lightly with our genial classmate, and prosperity has in no manner lessened the kindliness and sincerity of his heart. Long may he live to continue to be the same sincere, genial, considerate, and kindly friend of all his classmates!

"With best wishes to yourself and to all the other members of '85."

JAMES MOTT HARTSHORNE, Jr.

"I am still a member of the New York Stock Exchange, engaged in the stock brokerage business. My life has continued uneventful, and consequently pleasant and happy."

DANIEL LYMAN HAZARD.

"In the summer of 1892 I finished the work I had been doing for the Massachusetts Topographical Survey Commission, and obtained a position as computer in the Coast and Geodetic Survey, which I hold at present. I have lived uninterruptedly in Washington since the last report, except for a short vacation each summer. Nothing has happened to me in the way of honors, titles, or weddings."

WILLIAM HENRY HIDDEN, Jr.

Is in the banking business at Boston, as actuary of the United States Trust Company.

HENRY THEODORE HILDRETH.

January 1, 1892, I was professor of Greek in the University of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio. From September, 1892, to June, 1893, I was the temporary head of the Greek department of Brown University (with the title of Assistant Professor of Greek History and Literature) in the absence of the professor-elect in Europe. Since then I have been engaged in private study, partly in the Harvard Graduate School, my special field being research work in Latin syntax."

JOSEPH ADNA HILL.

"I respond to your summons with some reluctance, because there is so little of achievement in my record. I feel tempted to take refuge in some indefinite, non-committal phrase, such as 'In business.' But the unvarnished facts are these: I returned to Germany in February, 1892, and received the degree of Ph.D. from the University of Halle the following summer. Returning to America, I located in Philadelphia, holding an appointment as lecturer in the University of Pennsylvania during the academic year 1892–93. Since then I have spent most of my time, with the exception of the summer months, in Cambridge, making use of the college library for purposes of private study and research. All I have to show for my labor are a few minor contributions to the literature of Political Economy and Public Finance. There is one monograph on the 'History of Political Economy,' translated by me from the German work by Professor Cohn, and the rest consists of articles contributed to the 'Quarterly Journal of Economics.' And here endeth the first decade."

WILLIAM HENRY RAYMOND HILLIARD.

"I have been in Pittsburg almost continually since graduating, and, beyond keeping in good health and spirits, have accomplished nothing startling, or, as I judge, worthy of note in the Class Report." Has not been in active business since 1892.

MARLAND COGSWELL HOBBS.*

Born November 20, 1862, in Roxbury (now Boston), Mass. Died June 3, 1891, at Brookline, Mass.

See Report III., page 32.

HARRY HOLDEN.

"Still in business in Pittsfield, Mass.; admitted to firm March 1, 1894. George Bailey & Company."

JOHN FRANCIS HOLLAND.

"I have been devoting my time and efforts to the building up of a law business in Chicago, and have met a fair degree of success. The office of special assessment attorney which I hold is an appointive office, and one of considerable importance in Chicago. It is particularly valuable for the opportunity it gives for the trial of jury cases.

"I expect to return to my private practice in the firm of Hamlin, Holland & Boyden after the municipal election in April."

WILLIAM PARMELEE HOMANS.

Has not reported. Last address, 42 Broad street, New York.

EDWIN HOWARD.

"Have been with Miss Julia Marlowe's (now Mr. and Mrs. Taber's) company since September, 1891, and shall be with the same company another season."

SHAFTER HOWARD.

"I have been in California the greater part of the time since January, 1892. I came to Boston last year in the month of May, and have remained here most of the time since. I am the selling agent of an oil company (The American Oil Company) the headquarters of which are at 44 Broadway, New York city. I am to remain in the East indefinitely on business, and shall probably be away from Boston much of the time on trips about the country for my company."

Has recently moved to New York city.

ALFRED WILLIAM HOYT.

"In 1893 I spent the winter abroad, travelling through Spain, France, Italy, Greece, and Egypt. In 1894 I again went abroad, visiting Italy, Ceylon, and India."

JOHN LAMONT HURST.

"I continued in the real estate and loan business in Denver, Col., until June, 1893, when I made a trip to Europe, travelling extensively through the English isles, Central Europe, and Northern Africa. In February, 1894, I accepted a position in the Consulate General at Rome, Italy, where I am at the present time occupied."

CYRUS WENDELL IRISH.

Is still engaged in his profession of teaching at Lowell, Mass.

LOUIS LINCOLN JACKSON.

"Since January 1, 1892, I have lived in Brooklyn, and am still employed as chemist by E. R. Squibb & Sons."

ARTHUR STODDARD JOHNSON.

"In February, 1892, I went to the South to derive benefit from the outdoor life in the mild temperature. In the summer of 1892 I took a most delightful tour on my bicycle through Touraine, Brittany, and Normandy. In the fall of 1892 I went to California, and spent the winter in the state, looking into and studying the recources of the state in regard to investments. In the summer of 1893 I went to Oregon, Washington, and to Alaska, returning in the fall by the interesting Canadian Pacific route, also taking in the Yellowstone Park. I visited, of course, the Columbian Exposition, and was duly impressed by the wonderful thought, judgment, and good taste manifested in the planning and arrangement of the buildings and grounds.

"The winter of 1893–94 I spent in Boston, and found many things to occupy my time in church work, Young Men's Christian Association work, and philanthropic enterprises. The summer I spent at Nahant and on the water, and am now carrying on the same life as last winter, save that I have interested myself in some business connected with my father's estates."

Is vice-president and treasurer of the Boston Young Men's Christian Association.

HENRY WALTER JONES.

"I have very little out of the usual routine to relate since 1892. It seems to me I have had more than my share of poor health since then, which has incapacitated me for business, but I am in much better shape now, and hope in a few months' time to be as 'good as the best.'"

EDWARD KIRK KEEP.

Has been travelling in Europe for three years, and is still abroad.

ARTHUR KEITH.

"I have been occupied in professional exploration under the United States Geological Survey, chiefly in Tennessee, North Carolina, and Virginia. During the winters, which I have spent in Washington, I have been busy with the reports and draughting connected with my field work."

DANIEL KELLEHER.

"I have confined myself almost exclusively to the practice of law since I came to Seattle in March, 1890. I find there is a good field in this new state for any young man to practise his profession.

"I have been East to the Atlantic coast three times in the past three years. I attended the Democratic national convention at Chicago in 1892, then went on to Cambridge for 'Commencement' of that year. In the spring of 1893 I went East and South on a business trip. Last spring and summer I went East and South on a pleasure trip for some months.

"While I devote most all my time to my profession, I take some interest in politics, and generally attend the political conventions of my party in the county and state. I presided over the Democratic county convention of 1892, and at this convention I received the nomination for judge of the Superior Court of King county. I was, however, — fortunately, I think, — defeated at the polls."

MAXIMILIAN LINDSAY KELLNER.

Still assistant professor of Old Testament Literature at the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge.

CHARLES CARROLL KING.

"I have done little but pursue the practice of law. My vacations have been spent at my old home in Montpelier, Vt. Last year I went to Chicago during the World's Fair, and while there I hunted up Holland of '85. This year and last I have adopted whist as a recreation; I took part in the first tournament of the New England Whist Association, meeting many fine players of the game."

RALPH MARTIN LANE.*

Ralph Martin Lane, son of Francis Adams Lane and Emma H. Lane, was born in St. Louis, Mo., August 25, 1863. He prepared for college at Phillips Exeter Academy, Exeter, N.H.; entered Harvard College with honors with the class of 1885, and graduated in due course with the class.

Lane was married soon after leaving college to Miss Julia Lane Ulrici, who, with three fine boys, survives him.

His eyes forbade the study of law, which he wished to pursue, and he cast about for a business opening, and in January, 1888, became the secretary and treasurer of the Whitman Agricultural Company of St. Louis. This position he held at the time of his death.

The years immediately following his graduation he passed abroad or in St. Louis. On his return to his native city his uniform courtesy, geniality, and public spirit won friends on all sides. One of his acquaintances there expressed himself to me, saying, "I never knew Lane well, but his death was a loss to us all, for he was actively interested in many things which gave pleasure to many, and to many beyond his own circle of friends."

Lane had all the generosity and warmth of the South combined with the energy and enthusiasm of the West, while his years of residence and edution in the East and in Europe gave his mind balance, breadth, and maturity.

He was one of the board of governors and a house officer of the University Club of St. Louis, and with other Harvard men did much to bring that organization to its present standard and reputation.

Those of his classmates who, after graduation, were fortunate enough to meet him in St. Louis, remember the heartiness of his welcome, and the generosity of his hospitality. Nothing was too good for a member of the class of 1885 — indeed for any Eastern man who, claiming our Alma Mater, sojourned within the gates of St. Louis, and chanced to encounter Ralph Lane. In these days, the man who seeks to succeed in business finds his life circumscribed by its exacting and, for most of us, narrow demands, and when that life is cut short exceptional achievements of general interest can seldom, if ever, be recorded. But the narrowness of a field of action cannot detract from the nobility of character which holds steadfastly to duty even unto death; and there are, I fear, few of us of whom it can be said, as it can be of Lane, that what leisure we had, what recreation we took, was always full of thoughts and efforts for our family and our friends, and self last of all.

By the time Lane's third son was born, Lane found himself confined more than ever to an exacting and responsible position, and the thought of his family, already large for a man of his age in these days, urged him on still further towards overwork. He found it hard to get much-needed recreation, without neglecting the interests of the Whitman Company. So, whatever the absolute necessity of remaining at his post, it certainly appeared absolute to him, and his plucky, steadfast application to his business through the long, hot summers of St. Louis reduced his system to a state of great debility, and recurrent attacks which seemed to indicate appendicitis filled his family and friends with anxiety.

He yielded at last to their entreaties, and in the summer of 1893 took a short vacation. Too short, however, to profit him much, and he returned to his work in very poor shape.

Shortly after his return, he was obliged to submit to an operation for appendicitis, under which he died September, 1893.

ROLLIN NORTH LARRABEE.

"Since January 1, 1892, I have been moving about from place to place, as ordered by the electrical concern for which I work, returning at intervals for a few days only to my home in Chicago.

"The summer of '93 found me in Hopkinsville, Ky., in charge of a small electric-light plant which supplied the stores and streets of that town. It was a pleasant experience, on the whole. Christian county is not in the "blue-grass" country, but it is nothing behind that famous section in the hospitality of its people.

"I made pleasant visits at Manlius, N.Y., and Watkins Glen, also at Pittsburg, Pa., and three at Oil City, Pa., and quite a stay at Plain City, Ohio. These, with a short stop at Milwaukee, Wis., are amongst my pleasantest recollections of the past three years.

"Just about a year ago, or to be exact, February 18, 1894, I was ordered to come to New York city and take a new position with the New York house of the Western Electric Company. Except for five not over-pleasant weeks at a small town in Pennsylvania, and occasional short trips to Montreal, Boston, Baltimore, and several small places, my time has been passed in New York, where I hope to stay permanently."

JOHN LAWRENCE.

Was commissioned lieutenant, Naval Brigade, M.V.M., September, 1892, and resigned July, 1894. His address is Groton, Mass., and Somerset Club, Boston.

EUGENE LENT.

San Francisco, Cal. Lawyer.

WILLIAM LEVERETT.

"My life has been uneventful but busy. I entered the employ of the Bradstreet Company in December, 1891, and was appointed superintendent of their Scranton office in February, 1892, and on removal of the headquarters to Wilkesbarre, I went there and was in charge of their office in the latter city. Resigned from their employ, and have been lately on the city staff of R. G. Dun & Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

"I was married October 5, 1892, to Miss Elizabeth McKelvy of Bloomsburg, Pa."

HENRY FOSTER LEWIS.

"Since January 1, 1892, I have not been anywhere in particular, except a short visit to Boston in the autumn of 1892, where, of course, I revived college and medical-school memories. Nothing in particular has happened to me, except the privilege, for which I shall always be thankful, of living in Chicago during the time of the Columbian Exposition, and of entertaining and meeting many Harvard mates who came to visit the Fair."

LAWRENCE LITCHFIELD.

"Excepting short outings in the East, North, and South, I have been nowhere, and, aside from the ordinary contingencies of medical practice, nothing has happened to me. My practice is increasing gradually, and enables me to maintain an appearance of solvency, and to live comfortably. I am still a bigoted optimist, and I am rather proud of it."

JOSEPH MANSFIELD LONG.

"I am still pastor of the Baptist church, East Winthrop, Me., being now in my fourth year with that church. Being always fond of rural life, and especially preferring the country as a home for my children during their earlier years, I have continued in my present charge, though there have been openings in the direction of city life and privileges. I have no publications of my own to report, but am fortunate in having a wife who has published a number of poems and one book. I have made use of Music III., and other studies, however, in a lecture on 'Handel and the Messiah,' which I have given in several places. With my professional duties, and with music and horticulture as my recreations, I have passed the last three years very pleasantly. While having to do with the serious side of life primarily, I have had a keen sense of enjoyment of its humorous side, and, if present, could furnish not a few fresh anecdotes for the next class supper."

DANIEL WILLIAM LOTHMAN.

"Nothing eventful has happened in my life since our last Class Report. I am still teaching Latin in the Central High School of Cleveland, a school which this year has an enrollment of about seventeen hundred pupils. In the profession of teaching, though not a great pecuniary reward, there is much pleasure for him who takes an interest in advancing the welfare of the young. So I have come to enjoy my work as a confirmed schoolmaster."

JOHN ROOFE McARTHUR.

"Have been practising law with the firm of Arnoux, Ritch & Woodford, 18 Wall street, New York." Is a member of the board of civil-service examiners for legal appointments.

ROBERT LATIMER McCOOK.

Has not reported. Business address, 120 Broadway, New York city.

WILLIAM MORROW McINNES.

"Since the date of the last report I have continued in the practice of my profession at Boston, Mass., and my life has been entirely uneventful. In the fall of 1892, after a short vacation at Moosehead Lake, Me., I travelled as far west as Nebraska, and in the fall of 1893 again went to Chicago. Otherwise, with the exception of short professional trips, my time has been spent in Boston and immediate vicinity. Was a member of the Common Council of Boston in 1894."

JOHN FRANCIS MAHONEY.

"I am continuing the practice of medicine, and nothing of interest or note has happened to me since my last report."

EDWARD DUDLEY MARSH.

"I wish I could send you a sketch, but I can't draw; never could."

Received the degree of A.M., Harvard, in 1892. Is one of the proprietors and principals of Hale's school for boys, Beacon street, Boston.

MANTON MAVERICK.

"Have been practising law in Chicago since last report. That's all."

EDMUND SMITH MIDDLETON.

"Since the last Class Report I have been residing in New York. One year I taught in St. Francis Xavier's College, New York, and during most of the three years I have been preparing boys for college and business, as a private tutor. During the autumn of 1893 I went abroad, and spent six months in England and on the Continent. During a two months' stay in Rome, I enjoyed the privilege of attending the formal closing of the Papal Jubilee. It was a grand sight; sixty thousand people in St. Peter's, Leo XIII. surrounded by cardinals, archbishops, and monsignori, the Roman nobility in a group on one hand, on the other the full diplomatic corps, and in the background thousands of ladies in black, with black lace veils on their heads, and all the men in full dress. In June, 1893, I received the degree of A.M. for a post-graduate course in Moral Philosophy, from the College of St. Francis Xavier, New York. Since the last report I have joined the ranks of benedicts, my wife being Sarah B. Kent, daughter of the late William Kent, M.D., of Paterson, N.J. We have one child, a son, John Middleton, whom I hope one day to send to Harvard."

EZRA PALMER MILLS.

"I have resided continuously in New York city since last report, and have continued the practice of law without any special incident arising worthy of note. Have made no extended trips except to visit the World's Fair, where I was made painfully aware of the refrigerating effects of Chicago's great ice house, Lake Michigan, and was duly thankful to reach home alive."

JUSTIN PERRY MINER.

"Change, both in residence and occupation, has been the chief feature of my life the past three years. Boston, New York, and Buffalo have each, in turn, served as a post-office address, and, incidentally, as home. At present, Buffalo is the city honored by my presence.

"I am still interested in the class of '85, and shall read the next report with great interest."

ALFRED HENNEN MORRIS.

"I was elected supervisor of the town of Westchester in the spring of 1892, and was elected to the Assembly in the autumn of 1892, and in the spring of 1893 was again elected supervisor of the town of Westchester. In the autumn of 1893 I received the regular Democratic nomination for senator, but was defeated.

"During the summer I am always in Westchester, and the winter months are spent in New Orleans and Texas. In New Orleans I have real-estate interests, and in Texas, about seventy-five miles from San Antonio, my brother and I have a horse ranch where we are breeding thoroughbred running horses on an extensive scale."

JAMES GREGORY MUMFORD.

"Since the last report I have continued to live and practise medicine at 197 Beacon street, Boston, spending the summer months in practice at Nahant.

"In 1892 I was appointed surgeon to out-patients at the Carney Hospital, South Boston, and in 1894, surgeon to out-patients at the Massachusetts General Hospital Boston.

"I have gone the usual round of office-holding and committee work in the Massachusetts Medical (Boston), Society for Medical Improvement, and other medical societies; but beyond that, routine professional work, and marriage, I find nothing to record."

WILLIAM STANISLAUS MURPHY.

"A quiet life with no special interesting events."
Is still at the Boston Custom House.

JOHN BREED NEWHALL.

"Having a little spare time, I have devoted myself partly to politics since 1892, serving a second time as president of the Common Council, that year, of my native city. In 1893 I was elected a member of the House of Representatives of Massachusetts, and devoted a large share of the session to hearing the needs of Boston for 'rapid transit.' Our labors came to nothing, as the proposed plan of the committee for a new street and an elevated railroad was defeated by a narrow vote of the people on account of the great expense of the project. In 1894, I was again a member of the Legislature, and sought to correct the abuses which had crept into the caucus system. We succeeded in making a start towards legalizing the caucus, and making it a primary election. By putting the caucus upon a fair and sound basis, a long step has been taken towards better men in office. Being a member for the third time this year, we expect to perfect the caucus act of 1894, so that all candidates at their primary meeting will be treated fairly. While attending the calls of my constituents at the State House, I have practised law as best I could in Boston and Lynn.

"I have travelled South and West during the past three years, and met, with much pleasure, many '85 men, as these calls are always pleasant to me. I make it a point to hunt up old classmates whenever chance brings me into their city. I trust that every time an '85 man is in Boston from a distance he will seek me at 209 Washington street."

SETH NICHOLS.

"Have been engaged in the lubricating oils, wax, and candle business at 143 Front street, New York city, since January 1, 1888."

JOHN HAWKES NOBLE.

"In the spring of 1892, I finished the tutoring work which had occupied the two preceding years, and, after a summer vacation of generous, college-day proportions, struck into practical law work in Boston. That autumn I went into the office of Messrs. Shattuck & Munroe as a student, and, after remaining there two years, started for myself, hanging out a shingle at 40 State street, where I hope to wave it indefinitely."

WILLIAM BELDEN NOBLE.*

Born in Essex, N.Y., October 17, 1860. Died at Glenwood, Col., July 27, 1896.

The sudden death of our classmate, while visiting the mountains of Colorado in search of health and rest, has brought a deep sense of sadness to those of the class of 1885 who knew and loved him. His earnestness of purpose, purity of character, and faith in God and man so impressed itself on all his friends and associates that this small tribute to his memory is offered to the class as in some measure expressing their feeling of loss through his death.

William Belden Noble was the only son of Belden Noble and Adeline M. (Ferris) Noble, and from early youth lived with his family in Washington, D.C.

His first collegiate work was done at Princeton, where he passed one year before entering Harvard in the class of 1884. He entered at once into the life of the college, in the full vigor of youth, and with the highest ideals of his duty to the world and his fellow men. He applied himself conscientiously to his studies, and at the same time, as long as his health permitted, spent considerable energy in athletics and literary work.

He played on his Freshman class football eleven and on the University lacrosse twelve, of which he was also the captain for a time.

His literary tastes made him an earnest and constant writer for the "Crimson Bi-Weekly," the daily "Herald Crimson," and for outside papers, while his social life found expression through his membership in the O.K., the Institute of 1770, the D.K.E., and the Hasty Pudding Club.

But his close attention to his studies, together with his other interests in the life of the University, proved too great a strain, and in his junior year he was obliged to leave the University on account of nervous prostration.

After resting for a year, he returned to Cambridge in the senior year of our class, and, although not in good health, took up his studies again, and was graduated among those of the highest rank of the class of 1885, receiving honorable mention in English, English composition, and political economy, and being entitled to a dissertation as a Commencement part.

The dissertation which he delivered was upon Faith, a fitting subject for one whose whole life and thought were consecrated to Truth and guided by Faith.

After graduation he passed some time in travel and in the care of his father's estate. In 1887 he was married to Miss Nannie Yulee of Florida, who, with their only child, Yulee, survives him. In 1888 he returned to Cambridge with his wife, to prepare himself for the ministry, and studied for two years in the Episcopal Theological School. His health, however, would not permit him to continue his studies, or to do active work, and for the last few years he has travelled constantly with his family in a hopeless search for health.

Everywhere, those who met him have been impressed with his fine personality and inspired by his spiritual, guileless life. Only the day before his death, just as he was leaving his ranch life in Colorado to join his family in the East, he wrote to his devoted wife, —

"I live in the ever-present consciousness of my God, so near, so loving, so great."

That expression was the undertone of his life, the spiritual growth of that faith which he hoped to teach. In all his intellectual pursuits and spiritual aspirations his wife gave him full sympathy, and together they strove after the same ideals.

His constant thoughts were a fervent prayer and thanksgiving;

"Reaching out his eager and quickened faculties to the spiritual world around him."

ELIOT NORTON.

"I have practised law without interruption in New York city."

EDWARD ISAAC KIMBALL NOYES.

Is in the investment securities business, 53 State street, Boston.

GEORGE READ NUTTER.

"I have remained in the practice of the law in Boston, and on January 1, 1893, became a member of the firm of Warren & Brandeis, with which I had been connected since my admission to the bar. In the summer of 1893 I took a trip to England with our classmate Stephen S. Bartlett. We went over and back on a freight steamer, and spent the time in various out-of-the-way places, and in some of the cathedral towns. With this exception, my life, although of some interest to me, has not been particularly interesting to anybody else, and I have nothing further to report."

JOSÉ VICTOR OÑATIVIA.

"I regret to say that I have had a most uneventful life since 1892. A year previously I went to Europe, and travelled constantly for three years, visiting all the great cathedrals and their towns, down the western part of France, and through Italy, spending my summers in Switzerland, or in England or Scotland, having no definite abode for more than a few months at a time. I am here now to see some friends, and to attend to some private affairs, intending to return to Europe, where I shall be obliged to live, probably, on account of the health of some of my family, the climate on this side not suiting them."

CHAUNCEY GOODRICH PARKER.

"In the summer of 1892 I was in Europe for three months. I have been in active practice as a lawyer during all this time, and have nothing of special personal interest to report."

GEORGE FAIRBANKS PARTRIDGE.

"After two pleasant years in Great Barrington, Mass., as principal of the high school there, and a vacation visit to Chicago, I came back to Boston in 1893 as a junior master in the West Roxbury High School at Jamaica Plain, where I am living now."

JAMES KIRKE PAULDING.

"The past three years of my life have been passed continuously in New York, with the exception of a trip to Europe in the summer of 1893, when I attended (as an onlooker) the international congress of socialists at Zürich, and of three months last summer, passed at my home in the country. These years have been occupied with miscellaneous literary work, and a minor participation in some of the local efforts designed to improve existing social conditions. The best of my service was given as treasurer of the People's Singing Classes, now become the People's Choral Union, an organization to extend the knowledge and love of music among working people, of which our classmate J. M'G. Goodale is now the president. If these years have not brought wisdom, neither have they extinguished faith — that is, perhaps, the best that can be said for them."

HORATIO PERRY PEIRSON.

"My life has been a quiet and routine one. I have been in business in Boston, and have not travelled, or done anything of any interest to the class.

CHARLES ALBERT PETERSON.

Has not reported. Was living in Cambridge when last seen by the secretary.

REUBEN PETERSON.

"I have been actively engaged in the duties of my profession since the last Class Report, and devoting more and more time to gynecology and abdominal surgery."

JOHN SANBORN PHILLIPS.

Manager "McClure's Magazine" and newspaper syndicate, New York city.

PALMER ELLIS PRESBREY.

Is still with the National Bank of Redemption, Boston, as assistant cashier. Is still much interested in tennis and tennis tournaments.

FREDERIC EUGENE PUFFER.

"During the past few years my time has been almost wholly occupied with business routine in which one day is very like another. I regret to state that those days which did not resemble the others — the ones on which I had no business that needed attention — were no more profitably occupied than those on which I had the routine to go through. This necessity for leaving so many blanks in my report is, however, not without its consolations, for of 5 (e) I have a great dread."

SHERIDAN PITT READ.

"There is little to report as regards my life from January 1, 1892, until the 29th of September, 1893, at which time the President appointed me United States Consul at Tientsin, to represent American interests in Northern China, embracing the provinces of Chihli, Shangtung, Shansi, and Shensi.

"Our second daughter, Dorothy Quincy Hancock, was born in Boulogne-sur-Mer, France, in June, 1892.

"In June, 1894, there was born to us at the consulate in Tientsin, a son, Sheridan Pitt, whose death, in Chefoo, in May of this year, has sadly marred our lives in northern China.

"These are the principal events that touch the fireside, and they are common to us all.

"With regard to my public career, much arising from the recent war might be said.

"The consul at Tientsin holds rather a unique office, the position being consular and at the same time semi-diplomatic. He is the right-hand man of the minister at Peking, as Tientsin is the home of Earl Li Hung Chang, Viceroy of Chihli, etc., and consequently, at times, equal to Peking in political importance, and always second to Peking.

"The viceroy directed the war, and Tientsin has been the head war-centre for the Chinese.

"It can easily be imagined that I have been kept busy advising Washington and Peking of the doings round about me. The main details of the war, interwoven with much newspaper rubbish, you all know.

"My official connection with certain events came about in that the United States assumed to protect Japanese interests in China, and Chinese interests in Japan.

"I am pleased to inform my classmates that I believe I acquitted myself of the delicate and important responsibility of protecting the Japanese and their interests to the entire satisfaction of the Japanese, who have taken every opportunity to thank me.

"In connection with the exchange at Chefoo of the ratifications of the Shimonascki Treaty, the following, taken from the 'Peking and Tientsin Times,' will perhaps be of interest to my classmates: —

"His Excellency, Edwin Dun, United States Minister at Tokyo, Japan, has enclosed to Sheridan P. Read, Esquire, U.S. Consul at this port, the following letter from H.I.J.M's. Minister for Foreign Affairs: —

"'FOREIGN OFFICE.

TOKYO, 23rd May, 1895.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: —

Mr. Ito has informed me of the courtesies shown and assistance rendered to him by Mr. Sheridan P. Read, the American Consul in Tientsin, on the Exchange of Ratifications of the Treaty at Chefoo, and I wish to tender to him my sincere thanks on behalf of the Japanese Government.

Will you, therefore have the kindness to convey to him the acknowledgment of the Japanese Government. I remain,

Sincerely yours,

His Excellency, MUTSU.'

The American Minister, etc.

"Mr. Ito, the Japanese envoy to Chefoo for effecting the exchange of the ratifications of peace, also addressed to me the following letter: —

"'NAGATACHO, TOKIO, JAPAN,

June 4th, 1895.

HON. SHERIDAN P. READ,

U.S. Consul, Tientsin.

DEAR SIR: I beg leave to address you these few lines to tender my sincere gratitude for the valuable services and assistance you so kindly rendered me during my mission in Chefoo.

Immediately on my return home, I brought the same to the notice of His Majesty the Emperor, and also to H.M.'s Government. I am informed that your good offices, so effectually rendered, have been duly taken into consideration both by His Majesty and the Government, the acknowledgment of which will no doubt be manifested in due form.

MIYOJI ITO.'

"In precisely what way I rendered the Japanese envoy a service, at this momentous time, of sufficient importance to call forth the above letters, is of course a state secret; otherwise I should enjoy making it public in the privacy (?) of our class records."

WATERS DEWÉES ROBERTS.

"My life was one of quiet routine until, in the fall of 1892, changes in the responsibility thrown on me were caused by the resignation of Dr. Brooks as rector of Trinity Church. In June, 1893, I resigned my work in Boston for a year of holiday. Most of my time was spent in Hanover, Germany. While in Hanover in the spring of 1894, I was asked to come back to Boston and take charge of St. John's Parish, East Boston. This I have done very gladly, and have settled again happily into the routine of parish work."

CHARLES PROSSER ROBINSON.

"Since our last report I have been actively engaged in the practice of law in the city of Pittsburg. Aside from cases conducted in the lower courts, I have managed the following from the beginning to the end: Fowler v. Smith, 153 Pa. St. 639 (1893); American Bank's Appeal, 153 Pa. St. 98 (1893); Scott's Appeal, 159 Pa. St. 165 (1893)."

EDWARD DRAKE ROE, Jr.

"Since September, 1892, I have been pretty steadily engaged in mathematical work at Oberlin. I am associated with Professor F. Anderegg, who was formerly an instructor in mathematics at Harvard, and who took his A.M. there in 1889. He is at the head of our mathematical department. My appointment here as associate professor of mathematics was made permanent in 1894. Besides the regular mathematical work, I have given lectures on mathematical physics, and on the algebra of logic, owing to the illness of professors in the departments concerned. In the fall of 1893 we were very much gratified at securing for Oberlin the collection of mathematical books published by Teubner, and sent to Chicago by the German government to represent the mathematical section of the German University exhibit.

"I have published a philosophical thesis, 'The Probability of Freedom: A Critique of Spinosa's Demonstration of Necessity,' in the 'Bibliotheca Sacra' for October, 1894.

"Harvard '85 men who may come to Oberlin will be cordially welcomed at all times."

GEORGE WILLIAM ROLFE.

"January, 1892, found me hard at work as chemist and 'superintendent of boiling-house' at 'Soledad,' the plantation of E. Atkins & Company, near Cienfuegos, Cuba. We had a successful crop, and finished turning it into sugar on June 1, when I returned to the States by a beautiful journey along the south coast of Cuba and via the Bahamas. In November I made a year's contract with my old employers, the Charles Pope Glucose Company at their works in Geneva, Ill. The every-day incidents of my work had a tragic interruption on May 17, when an explosion wrecked one section of the five-story building. Seven men were instantly killed. While the chance would have been in my favor had I been in the building, I congratulate myself that an engagement with the dentist had caused my absence.

"Among the pleasures of my sojourn West were the frequent visits which I could make to the World's Fair, about forty miles away. I came East in December, 1893. Wishing to work up details of certain lines of analytical work, I studied at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for a couple of months. In April I went to Newport, R.I., on some investigation in sewage purification for Col. George E. Waring. These experiments were brought to a successful close October 25. Since, I have been engaged in similar experiments for Col. Waring and the Silver Springs B. & D. Company at Providence, R.I."

THEOPHILUS HUNTINGTON ROOT.

"In the spring of 1892 I accepted an appointment as tutor in New Testament Literature for two years in the University of Chicago. At the close of the first year, in October, 1893, owing to overwork for a number of years preceding, I was obliged to take leave of absence for the fall quarter. Finding that an indefinite period would be necessary for recuperation, I resigned my position January 1, 1894.

"Since August, 1894, my mother and myself have been in New Orleans, where my health has been greatly improved. We shall go on later to California, our original destination. Owing to the fact that we left St. Louis at the time when the hot wave of 1894 struck the country, we have found New Orleans cool. The hottest day this spring was June 2 (94°), the highest preceding temperature having been 89°. This is a word for New Orleans to our New York and Chicago friends.

"It is now almost ten years since our ivy orator, in closing his oration, enjoined the class somewhat as follows: 'Remember, my children, to-morrow you are to run the world.' Gifted as our orator was with a wisdom beyond his years, it is probable that he knew the force of his own words, at least to some extent. I suppose the forthcoming secretary's report will show how well the injunction has been obeyed. Since the world is a rather big world to run, and sometimes difficult to manage, it need not be surprising if the story of so arduous an undertaking shall be a varying one. It was a pleasure, in the close of the political campaign last fall, to know of the success of the 1885 men. They are now our Congressmen.

"Let us hope that the next ten years will prove years of good fortune to every member of the good old class of 1885."

WILLIAM NOBLE ROUNDY.

"Delivered twelve lectures on English literature before summer school of Northwestern University during June and July, 1893."

EDWARD TERRY SANFORD.

"Since the beginning of 1892 I have been steadily engaged in the practice of the law at Knoxville, Tenn., being now, as then, a member of the firm of Lucky & Sanford. I have been kept closely at work, with no opportunity for travel, except business trips and short summer outings, including, of course, a few days at the World's Fair. My time outside of regular work has recently been chiefly devoted to whist and some study of early Tennessee history. Last year, at the commencement exercises of the University of Tennessee, at which was celebrated the one-hundredth anniversary of the founding of the university, I delivered the address before the Alumni Association and the university. The address, which was historical in character, has since been published by the university under the title of 'Blount College and the University of Tennessee.'"

CHARLES AUSTIN SAWIN.

"From January 1, 1892, until November, I lived at 73 Brattle street, Cambridge, Mass. On November 2 I was married to Carrie H. Allen of Somerville, and have lived in the latter city since that date. I have continued in the National Bank of Redemption, and was appointed discount clerk in October, 1893. There have been no other important events during that time."

ARTHUR BROWN SAWYER.

"Since January 1, 1892, I have continued in the glazed-kid commission business, most of the lines coming from Wilmington, Del. In addition to the above, I have been doing a general leather business.

"In May, 1893, I became treasurer of the Sawyer Crystal Blue Company, at 27 Broad street, Boston, with factory in Chelsea, Mass.

"I was made a director of the Winnisimmet National Bank in Chelsea in the fall of 1894.

"Outside of a short visit to Chicago last year, I have taken no vacations, and my trips have mainly been to New York and Delaware on business."

WILLIAM MUNRO SEAVEY.

"Nothing out of the common course." Has written two books: "Massachusetts Town Offices" and "Manual for Notaries and Justices."

ARTHUR WESLEY SIM.

"Since last report, have been practising law in Peabody, Mass."

ROBERT FIELDS SIMES.

"Practising law in Boston."

JOHN SIMPKINS.

"Farmer." Is the representative in Congress from the 13th or "Cape" district of Massachusetts. Simpkins' chrysanthemums are among the most gorgeous annually exhibited at the show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

HARRY WILLIAMS SIMPSON.

"I have been practising law in New York city during the entire period."

ALFRED PERCIVAL SMITH.

Is busily engaged in the practice of the law in Philadelphia, at 602 Provident Building.

EDWARD IRVING SMITH.

"But one event of any consequence has happened to me since January 1, 1892. My wife died February 9, 1893.

"I ran on a straight Democratic nomination for mayor of Waltham last fall, but was beaten by 105 votes. The usual Republican majority is six to eight hundred."

Is an associate justice of the Waltham District Court and is familiarly known as "Judge" Smith.

WILLIAM CHRISTOPHER SMITH.

Lawyer, Boston, Mass.

Born at Ashtabula, Ohio, October 5, 1861. Died at Ashtabula, January 5, 1887. See Report II., page 49.

CHARLES AUGUSTUS STRONG.

"Nothing worth chronicling has happened to me since last report. I am still lecturing on psychology at the University of Chicago, and absorbed in the study of the subject."

EBEN SUTTON.

"I have been in Boston since January 1, 1892, continuing in the woollen manufacturing business at North Andover until April, 1894, when I sold out to my brother. August of 1894 saw me start in the stock-brokerage business with James W. Bowen, of the class of '82.

"The main events in my life during the past three years were the happiness brought into it by the birth of my daughter, on January 25, 1894, and our sad loss by her death but a short year afterward, on February 16, 1895."

HENRY KIRKLAND SWINSCOE.

"Mill work doesn't leave such a lot of time for other things; still I have found much pleasure acting with the Footlight Club of Jamaica Plain. During that time of the year when the roads are good I ride my wheel as much as possible, and get no end of good times out of it. There you have me: working when I have to, acting when I can, and wheeling when the weather permits."

ALFRED WILLIAM TAUSSIG.

"Since last report my life has been uneventful. A few trips to St. Louis, Chicago, Milwaukee, etc., have relieved the monotony of business routine, and an occasional visit to Boston brings back fond recollections of our Alma Mater."

FREDERICK SPAULDING TAYLOR.

"I spent the winter of 1892 in Aiken, S.C., the winter of 1893 in California, and the winter and summer of 1894 in Europe."

HOWARD AUGUSTUS TAYLOR.

"Having been pretty well played out at work, I took a six months' trip in Europe after my marriage in June, 1892; but since January 1, 1893, I have been busy again all the time at my law office, working for senior partners. There is not much interesting in that except to them and myself, and I am apt to think the loafers in the class have the best of it. Certainly they do in biographies."

EDWARD CLAFLIN THAYER.

"My life since leaving college has been pleasant and uneventful. Nothing startling or out of the ordinary has happened to me. Have lived in Brooklyn all the time except for short vacations. Leave this day for a two weeks' trip to Bermuda."

Is in the same business in New York city.

ERNEST LAWRENCE THAYER.

"I eat hearty, and never wake before seven in the morning.

"I will attempt to speak at our decennial dinner, if I am not overcome with fright between now and then."

Is a woollen manufacturer at Worcester, Mass.

JOHN ELIOT THAYER.

Farmer, and interested in the breeding of trotting horses and dogs. Lancaster and Boston, Mass.

WILLIAM SIDNEY THAYER.

"There is really nothing to say . . . my address is the same, and I still retain the position of resident physician here, Johns Hopkins Hospital. In the spring of 1895 I was appointed associate in medicine in the Johns Hopkins University."

This position is considered a distinguished honor.

EDWARD JAMES TILTON,*

Who died April 17, 1896, at Andover, Mass., of anæmia, and was buried in Sleepy Hollow cemetery, at Concord, Mass., was born at North Hampton, N.H., June 20, 1859, and was the son of the late James Seavey Tilton, a veteran of the Civil War, and Rebecca A. (Hobbs) Tilton. He entered Phillips Academy at Andover in 1873, and was graduated in "the Centennial Class," June, 1878. The following year he spent in preliminary medical studies with Dr. Allen, at Richford, N.Y. He entered Harvard in the fall of 1879, class of 1883, but the ill health with which he had a life-long struggle interrupted his college work, and after enforced vacations he joined the class of '85 at the beginning of the Sophomore year in 1882.

After graduation he devoted himself to medicine, pursuing, with some interruptions, the courses of the Harvard Medical School. He availed himself also of hospital residence and practice, and travelled abroad with a private patient, thus helping to prepare himself for his profession. He was married June 30, 1889, to Miss Mary Azuba Wheeler of Concord, Mass., and in 1893 established himself in Newton Centre, Mass., where he won recognition at once as a skilful practitioner, and assured himself that he had not mistaken his aptitudes, nor failed in preparing himself for a successful career in medicine. In April, 1895, he was forced to relinquish practice. After more than a year of the best medical treatment, and the assiduous attentions of his nearest friends, his promising life came to a tranquil close. His wife, mother, and an only sister survive him.

Dr. Tilton came of a scholarly ancestry, many of his relatives being graduates of Harvard. His religious life developed in his early manhood, and he connected himself with the Christian church. His instincts and bearing were those of a reserved, thoughtful, self-respecting, educated gentleman. His friendships were few and strong, and he was faithful unto death. The choice of a profession was made early, but he exacted of himself, in spite of hindrances, a full, liberal education, and more than the ordinary professional preparation. Only those who knew him intimately, or had special opportunity to note his personal history, can appreciate how long and hard was the struggle through which he passed without faltering, till, just after crossing the threshold of the anticipated career, without a murmur he laid down his cherished ambitions in an unspoken but sublime resignation. The record is heroic and noble.

> " Being made perfect in a little while, he fulfilled long years;
> For his soul was pleasing unto the Lord."

The committee appointed to express the sympathy of the class prepared the following resolutions, copies of which were sent to Dr. Tilton's widow and widowed mother: —

Whereas the class of '85 learns with sorrow of the death of Dr. Edward J. Tilton on April 17, 1896:

Resolved, that we take this opportunity to express our sincere grief at the loss of our classmate, and the untimely closing of a promising career.

While his natural diffidence and modesty prevented him from having so large a circle of friends, or being as well known by his classmates as some, yet he won the respect and esteem of those of us who had the pleasure of knowing him, by his kindly disposition and equable temperament. It was his misfortune not to enjoy robust health, and although, in his studies and in the pursuit of his profession, ill health was a serious handicap, his quiet perseverance won him a position which was full of promise. His manliness was nowhere better shown than in the quiet fortitude and patience with which he endured what he must have recognized as a hopeless battle with disease.

Resolved, that the class tenders to his bereaved family their heartfelt sympathy in this great affliction.

FRANK LOUIS VAN CLEEF.

"Was elected Professor of Greek in the University of Wisconsin in the summer of 1891, a position resigned in 1894 to accept a call as Acting Associate Professor of Greek at Cornell University."

HIRAM WARREN WADSWORTH.

"My life for the past three years can be of little general interest to the class. On January 1, 1893, our old firm was incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts as Wadsworth, Howland & Company, Incorporated, and I was elected a director and clerk of the corporation; since that time we have established three branch stores in different parts of New England.

"Having been somewhat unwell for two years, I was advised by my physician to move to a higher location, and accordingly, in the spring of 1894, I moved from Cambridge, my residence since graduation, to Wellesley Hills. I did not gain there as fast as desired, and in July went to the Adirondacks for the summer, living in a tent and leading an out-of-door life; on my return home in September, my physician sent me to Colorado Springs for the winter, where I am at the present time. I hope to be with you all at the class dinner in June, but my future plans are at present in an unsettled condition, although my health is much improved."

Has written later, stating that he has located permanently at Pasadena, Cal. He was one of the Cambridge common council when in Cambridge.

"In the spring of 1892 I was promoted to be Assistant Professor of Physics in Clark University, and in the summer of that year, on resignation of Professor Michelson, I took charge of the department. I spent the summer in the Adirondacks. During the next academic year, besides my lectures, I was engaged in preparations for a research to be presented in competition for a prize offered by a committee in Paris for Elihu Thomson, the research being carried out chiefly in July and August of 1893. The work was finished in a hurry, and the results written up in Chicago, while I was at the World's Fair, and dispatched to Paris. I heard nothing of my manuscript from August 31, 1893, to January 22, 1895, when I learned that I had been awarded the first prize of five thousand francs. The research was an experimental one on 'The Period of Electrical Oscillations,' and not a treatise on electricity, as was announced in the papers. While at the World's Fair I attended the congresses on mathematics and electricity, and read a paper on a new chronograph.

"I spent the summer of 1894 at Mount Desert.

"I am busily occupied with the duties of my professorship, which are onerous but very congenial. They consist not only in the delivery of lectures on theoretical physics, but also in the prosecution of research and the supervision of research by my students, the latter being a great responsibility. I enjoy here a position of greater independence than I could have in any institution in this country, and have consequently been able to carry out a plan formed at the beginning of my teaching career, with the result that I have probably lectured on a greater variety of subjects in the last three years than any man in the country in my department. I have given courses on the following branches of mathematical physics: dynamics, elasticity, hydrodynamics, sound, optics, thermodynamics, kinetic theory of gases, electricity, and magnetism, besides the following in pure mathematics: theory of functions of real and complex variables, definite integrals, differential equations. These lectures I hope to publish before the next report is issued, in three or four volumes, of which the volume on electricity and magnetism will probably appear this year. I give these uninteresting details in order to remove any impression that I am stranded in a one-horse college in a back town. Our university is certainly small, but not the other.

"From the above it will be gathered that I am happy and reasonably satisfied. I am in the best of health, though I never played football, and am glad of it. I have played nearly everything else, and enjoyed it, and do still. I heartily commiserate such of my classmates as have fallen victims to the competitive athletics of their college days.

"I have two children, the second, Arthur Gordon Webster, Jr., born November 9, 1893. I hope to send him to Harvard."

ALBION OTIS WETHERBEE.

He is still engaged in teaching, with residence in New York city.

CHARLES CHAPIN WHEELWRIGHT.

Is treasurer of The Proprietors of Rowe's Wharf Corporation at Boston.

FRANCIS WINTHROP WHITE.

"From the date of our Class Report three years ago until February, 1893, my residence continued to be Cincinnati, and no change occurred in my business relations. At that time, however, I was elected treasurer of our company (the Warren-Scharf Asphalt Paving Company), and have since then resided in New York city."

McDONALD ELLIS WHITE.

"My life from the beginning of 1892 to July, 1893, was uneventful, my time being divided between my business (which I continued to find interesting), and my duties and pleasures in connection with the First Corps of Cadets, M.V.M. My summer holiday has been spent with the Cadets in camp, and in some country place.

"The summer of 1894 was spent in travelling in Europe — France, Italy, the Austrian Tyrol, Vienna, Germany, Belgium, and a fortnight in London.

"On January 26 of this year (1895) I was married to Elizabeth F. (Safford) Hobbs of Salem."

JULIAN LINCOLN WHITESIDE.

"On account of ill health I resigned my position with Hubbard & Blake at Olean, N.Y., January 1, 1893. Spent nearly a year travelling throughout the West. January 1, 1894, started in the leather business on my own account in Buffalo, N.Y., where I am at present."

EDSON LEONE WHITNEY.

"1892–93, Professor of History and Philosophy at Norwich University; 1893–94, Instructor in History at Massachusetts Institute of Technology; 1894–95, Professor of History, Benzonia College."

Is now President of Benzonia College, which is situated at Benzonia, Mich.

CHARLES ALEXANDER WHITTEMORE.

Is active in the practice of law at Boston.

HENRY MORLAND WILLIAMS.

"I have continued to practise law at Boston with but little outing in the way of vacations. Our law firm has added another member, Baker, Harvard, '91, but still continues the old style of name, Hayes & Williams. We have changed our offices from 39 Court street to larger ones at 28 State street, Boston, and the address of the class secretary has necessarily changed. My family has increased until I now have three children. I am much interested in the First Corps of Cadets, in which, after seven long years of service, I received my warrant as sergeant in January, 1895.

GEORGE LANE WINLOCK.

"July 1, 1893, was appointed assistant-general freight agent N.Y., N.H & H. R.R., Old Colony system.

"Am also vice-president Association of General Freight Agents of New England."

Is now performing the duties of general freight agent on the same road and system.

SAMUEL ELLSWORTH WINSLOW.

"Chairman of Republican State Committee of Massachusetts in years 1893 and 1894.

"Presided at Republican State Convention at Music Hall, Boston, in October, 1894.

"In January, 1894, elected a director of the Citizens National Bank of Worcester, Mass.

"In January, 1895, elected a director of the Worcester, Leicester & Spencer Electric Street Railway Company; also a director of the Worcester & Milbury Electric Street Railway Company."

WILLIAM WARREN WINSLOW.

"I have given fairly close attention to the practice of the law, also interesting myself in banks and other local corporations. I have kept out of politics, have not married, and have taken no vacations exceeding three weeks. No honors have been conferred upon me since my last report other than that of trustee of the Adrian Hospital, and some advancement in freemasonry."

EGERTON LEIGH WINTHROP, Jr.

Lawyer; now a member of the firm of Jay & Candler of New York city. Still retains his interest in polo and polo matches.

EDWARD FRANKLIN WOODS.

"In March, 1894, joined my insurance business, which I had been conducting under the name of 'Crane & Woods,' with that of Capt. Frederic Hinckley under firm name of 'Hinckley & Woods.' At the same time, owing to the death of associates in our office, we succeeded to the agency portion of the business of a fire-insurance firm of long standing. In February, 1895, we increased our list of companies by the acquisition of the agency of the Northern Assurance Company of London."

JAMES REED YOCUM.

Is still practising medicine at Tacoma.

EDWARD BLAKE YOUNG.

"Nothing of interest has happened to me since my last report." Lawyer, St. Paul, Minn.

ROYAL PHELPS CARROLL.

Has not made a personal report, but all the class are probably familiar with his most creditable and sportsmanlike effort to bring back the Cape May and Brenton Reef cups which were carried to England in 1885 by the cutter "Genesta." In 1893, Carroll had Herreschoff build him the 84-footer "Navahoe," and took her across to England, and challenged for the cups. In the two ocean races from Cowes to Brest the "Navahoe" won the race for the Brenton Reef cup on September 13, 1893, from the Prince of Wales' cutter, "Britannia," and Carroll brought it back home; but the Cape May cup race was won by the English defender, and still remains on the other side. Mr. and Mrs. Carroll returned home on the "Navahoe" after a trip of forty-six days, reaching New York November 18, 1893. He has been rear commodore of the New York Yacht Club.

TEMPORARY MEMBERS.

EVERETT VERGNIES ABBOT.

"For a part of the period I lived with Dunham and two other friends in bachelor quarters of a most delightful luxuriance; but owing to the marriage of one of our number, and the somewhat unsettled plans of the others, those quarters were broken up, and I have since lived the roaming life of the average unmarried man.

"The larger part of the last two years was spent professionally in the office of Wheeler H. Peckham, who, with Albert Stickney, '59, another old chief of mine, was the mainstay and originator of the great Maynard uprising in this state in 1893. I have branched out for myself now, and feel as if my feet were securely planted on the second step of the professional stairway.

"By way of avocation, I have lectured on law (I am now in my second year) in the Metropolis Law School, an evening school of which the germinal idea must be credited to our classmate Bowen. The school was reorganized a year or two ago, confessedly on Harvard lines, and without egotism I may say that it is second to none except Harvard in efficiency, and not second to her in its ideals. I have also, in collaboration, written a book, about which the less said the better."

CHARLES LEE BARNES.

"Started the 'South San Francisco News,' which I still publish."

PRINCE LUCIEN CAMPBELL.

"My life has gone on very uneventfully in Monmouth since the date of the last Class Report. I have travelled over the greater part of the state in the interest of the Normal School, delivering addresses before various educational meetings. I have written occasionally for the newspapers and other periodicals.

"Last summer I joined the Mazamoe, a mountain-climbing club, and was one of the first party that ever spent the night on the summit of Mount Hood. I hope to make the ascent of Mount Ranier (14,400 feet) next summer. Two years ago I was present at the dinner of the Harvard Club in Portland, Ore. The number of Harvard men in the state is increasing, but we should be glad to welcome many more."

GOUVERNEUR MORRIS CARNOCHAN.

Is engaged in the banking business at 46 Exchange place, New York city, living in the city and at Riverdale-on-Hudson.

Graduated with the Class of '84.

JOHN PURINTON FAY.

"In September, 1891, the law firm of Gale, Fay & Henderson in Seattle, of which I was a member, was dissolved, and in 1892 I formed the law partnership of Fay, Gest & Henderson. Shortly afterwards I was retained by the Eastern bondholders of the Oregon Pacific and Willamette Valley and Coast Railroads to take charge in the West of their interests in the reorganization of these railroads. This required the greater portion of my time in the courts of Oregon, and resulted in opening offices at Portland, Ore., in the spring of 1893, in connection with those at Seattle. Since that time I have been continuously in the active practice of law between those two cities and states. Besides the fortunate success which has followed the practice of my profession, my home has recently been filled with great joy — the birth of a baby boy, who some day, we fondly hope, by proper training will be able to translate his present midnight howls into the vigorous 'Harvard, rah, rah, rahs!'"

DAVID SANDS FERRIS.

Has not reported. Address supposed to be as formerly, Ashton Plantation, Lamourie, P.O. Rapides Parish, La., where, in 1893 he was settled as a sugar planter.

FRANCIS WARREN HASTINGS.

Has not engaged in any active business. President of Hook & Hastings Company, organ manufacturers at Weston, Mass. Is an invalid. Spends his winters in Bermuda and his summers at Weston.

LUCIUS JUNIUS HENDERSON.

"In the spring of 1892 I associated myself with Mr. Edwin Milton Royle of Princeton, '83, for the production of his play of 'Friends.' We brought it out at the Standard Theatre, New York city, May 9, 1892, and since that time have been busy 'touring' with it throughout the United States and Canada. Have appeared in all principal cities (Brooklyn and Hoboken excepted) and in a few that are *un*principled — that don't like 'Friends,' that is to say.

"For further particulars see daily papers, and note the nice things we say about ourselves a few days in advance of our arrival in each city."

GEORGE HEYWOOD.

FRANK HITCHCOCK.

Is still engaged in the manufacture of pig iron in Youngstown, Ohio, with the Andrews & Hitchcock Iron Company.

WILLIAM HARRISON HOLLIDAY.

Is still in his old line of business as assistant cashier of the Southern California National Bank, Los Angeles, Cal.

WILLIAM JOHN HOPKINS.

"An account of my doings since our last report would be little more than an account of the department of physics in the Drexel Institute. I came to Philadelphia in March, 1892, and all my energies since that time have been devoted to the equipment, organization, and development of my department. In this, I believe I have been successful. My summers have been spent in Newburyport, Mass., in the pursuit of the usual diversions of rowing, sailing, fishing, and the like."

RICHARD FLINT HOWE.

BENJAMIN BOWDITCH THAYER.

"In 1892, was in the employ of the Bi-Metallic M. Co., with residence at Granite, Mont. In the summer of 1893 went to St. Louis, from which point I made an extensive trip through the zinc fields of Arkansas. In the fall of 1893 went to White Oaks, N.M., where I was interested in the operation of a gold mine, for a number of months. My next move was to California, where I located at San José, with my offices in San Francisco. Made a long trip through the Sierra Madré Mountains, Old Mexico, in May, 1894; also a trip through the state of Sonora, Old Mexico. Have examined numerous properties in different sections of California and Colorado, and am at present engaged in the same business."

CLASS HISTORY 1892-1895.

The class history for this period of three years is chiefly notable in its record of the accomplishment of the Class Album project. A short review of this work may not be out of place. The proposition originally broached by Fisk at the Commencement Day meeting of the class in 1890, resulted in the appointment of a committee of which Fisk was made working chairman. The labor that he gave, from its inception until the contract was signed with the publishers in 1893, — three full years from out of his time as a busy manufacturer, — can never be fully known or too highly appreciated by his classmates. To make the album perfect he corresponded with every graduate and non-graduate member of the class, and the representatives of several who had died, and procured photographs from many men whose pictures had not been included in the Eighty-five album in the college library, and so made the album complete. To secure the desired pictures of faculty, buildings, and groups, he had to ransack photograph galleries in Cambridge, Boston, and New York, in addition to private collections placed at his disposal. In this effort, too, he was successful in getting eventually what he wanted, and as a result, aside from the class pictures, the album has been pronounced the best and most complete souvenir of Harvard of our time. The lamentable death of Fisk in the summer of 1893 was a slight check to the work, but under the new chairman, McD. E. White, of the old class photographic committee of college days, the publication was pushed forward, and the album was ready for delivery before Commencement Day, 1894. The class may well congratulate itself on the success of this album, which is the only effort of just its kind which has ever been attempted by any college class. The report of the chairman of the committee appears in its proper place.

Commencement Day, 1893, came on June 28th and the class had the use of Holworthy 9 for the and last time.

About the usual number of men were present during the day, and a considerable contingent went to the alumni dinner. No business of importance was transacted, but a report as to progress made on the Class Album was given by Fisk, and the secretary announced the early appearance of the third report.

Some time after Commencement the third Class Report was ready and distributed.

Commencement Day, 1894, was Wednesday, June 27th. As the occupants of Holworthy 9 felt that they needed the use of their room on that day the class of Eighty-five were compelled to look elsewhere for a meeting ground. Hollis 23 was selected as the most available room, and was the scene of the Eighty-five gathering. It was no longer possible to designate it even vulgarly "punch," for on February 5, 1894, the President and Fellows had passed their now famous edict, as follows: —

"Voted. That hereafter no punches or distilled liquors shall be allowed in any College room on Class Day or Commencement Day. Every tenant of the College shall be held responsible for the observance of this rule in his own room, and he shall not allow the use of his room on those days by any Class Secretary or other person or persons without the previous written consent of the Bursar of the University, who shall not give his consent in any case until such Class Secretary or other person or persons shall have filed with him a written agreement that this rule shall be complied with."

And Eighty-five was regaled on a lunch of crackers, cheese sandwiches, and olives, washed down with Rhine wine, appollinaris, ginger ale, lemonade, — and beer. Some of the wealthier classes toasted each other in real "wine" but the modest dimensions of our class fund forbade anything beyond Niersteiner. Furthermore, in accordance with the above vote of the Fellows, the class secretary has now to go through considerable red tape as to consents and agreements, and personally pledges himself to the observance of the rule in the premises over which he presides. Nevertheless, exit rum punch.

It was voted that the thanks of the class be extended to the committee which had had charge of the preparation of the Class Album, and to express to the family of James L. Fisk the appreciation which the class felt for the work which he had done in that connection in its behalf. Appropriate action was also taken upon the deaths of Fisk and Lane, both of whom had died in the previous summer. Twenty-nine men were noted by the secretary as being present during the day, and several attended the alumni dinner. A copy of the Class Album was on exhibition all day, and attracted much attention from men both inside and outside of the class.

This Commencement Day was the third triennial anniversary of Eighty-five's graduation, but, in accordance with an earlier decision and a general custom among classes, notices were sent out that the dinner at the expense of the class fund would not be given until the decennial anniversary in 1895, and that a subscription dinner would be arranged for all attending the Commencement season who cared to be present. The experiment was also tried of having this dinner on the evening of Commencement Day itself, instead of the night before. Whether it was this innovation, or the fact that it was a subscription dinner, the occasion failed to attract a large number. The following twenty-two men, however, were present and enjoyed a good time in the "statesmen's" room at Young's Hotel: Seavey, Presbrey, Woods, McInnes, Ward, Newhall, Rand, Webster, Noyes, McD. E. White, Arnold, Sawyer, Harding, Sutton, Storrow, Boyden, Gorham, Williams, Henderson, Baldwin, Peirson, Storer. Baldwin came on from Washington to preside, and acted as toastmaster as well.

The song book had been modernized at the request of certain musical members, and contained, in addition to "Fair Harvard," the "Eighty-five Class Song," and other old favorites, these popular compositions: "The Man who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," "The Bowery," "Hello, Riley," and "The Party at Odd Fellows' Hall." Boyden recited Thayer's "Casey at the Bat," and L. J. Henderson made his first appearance with the class since 1883, and handsomely contributed more than his share of the amusement.

The dinner was also made the opportunity for discussing the subject whether special students who had socially been connected and identified with the men of Eighty-five in college should be admitted to the privileges and advantages of the class reunions, dinners, and reports. After a somewhat full discussion the matter was referred to a committee with full powers, appointed by Chairman Baldwin, consisting of the class secretary, Gorham, and Sutton. This committee later took action favorable to such admission, subject, however, to certain limitations.

The result of that vote and committee's actions was this circular, a copy of which has been sent to all:

"Attention is called to the following action:

'At a meeting of the Class of 1885, held in June, 1894, a committee was appointed to consider the advisability of extending the privileges of the class to Special Students who were closely connected with it during their college course.

'This committee has decided that the class secretary shall extend the privileges of the class, with the exception of voting and holding office, to any Special Student paying at least $25. to the class fund who in his judgment is eligible.'

The secretary is desirous that the names and present addresses of any such special students, together with their qualifications for eligibility be sent him by their friends so that notice of the coming dinner may be sent to all who are entitled.

HENRY M. WILLIAMS,
Secretary."

On Tuesday, June 25, 1895, the decennial anniversary dinner was held in the large dining room at Young's Hotel, the same place where our first graduate dinner was held ten years before.

The following eighty men were present: Abbot, Arnold, Bacon, Baldwin, H. Bartlett, S. S. Bartlett, Beaman, Billings, Boyden, Carpenter, Chanler, L. B. Clark, Codman, Colony, Coxe, Craigin, Curtis, Cushing, Davis, Draper, Foss, French, Gorham, Greenman, Halbert, Harding, Henderson, Hidden, Hill, Hildreth, Holland, Howard, Johnson, King, Lawrence, Mahoney, E. D. Marsh, McArthur, McInnes, Mills, Mumford, Murphy, Nichols, J. H. Thayer, J. E. Thayer, W. S. Thayer, Tilton, Trask, Wadsworth, Ward, Webster, Weld, Wheelwright, McD. E. White, Whittemore, Winlock, Woods, Young. The secretary was unavoidably absent, owing to a death in his family.

Special preparations had been made to insure a success, and a special committee had willingly aided the class committee in arranging song book and music, drumming up attendance, and in preparing the menu card.

The chairman of the class committee, Baldwin, presided, and French was toastmaster. The menu, the work of S. S. Bartlett assisted by Nutter, was so favorably commented on that it is reprinted complete for the benefit of those who were not present. The secretary has about two dozen copies of these menus which were left over, and if any member wishes one as a souvenir, it will be sent on application until the supply is exhausted.

Harvard College.

CLASS OF EIGHTY-FIVE.

Decennial Dinner,
Young's Hotel, Boston, June 25, 1895.

Our Mother! Ah, we pledged her on the day she bade us part,
The changing years but grave more deep her love within the heart;
So pledge again to-night the ties the changing years survive,
That bind us to each other: — Our Mother, Eighty-five.

Jones rang the bell in college days
Us chapel-wards to call —
But prayers are gone, we'll skip the grace,
And to the dinner fall.

Menu.

Little Neck Clams

Deep in the Thames's oozy bed
We lay, while o'er us flew,
And on to the finish swiftly sped,
Eighty-five's victorious crew.
We shouted aloud, "Eighty-five need not quail.
With Storrow to guide she'll show rudder to Yale."

From "Cantos of the Capitol,"
by S-mpk-ns.

---

Cream of Asparagus, aux Croutons
Consomme, St. Germain

Athletics, they were fair and bright
When Eighty-five once started: —
This is the soup they all got in
When Eighty-five departed.

From "Poems by the Way,"
by N-tt-r.

---

Penobscot Salmon,
Sauce Hollandaise

When as this Salmon swimming by
Did hear this dinner time was nigh,
He gave a dive,
And sought, impatient, to be hooked,
In order that he might be cooked
For Eighty-five.

From "Sea Life and other Poems,"
by C-rr-l

---

Fillet of Beef, Sauce Bearnaise
Lamb, Mint Sauce
Roast Spring Chicken

They frisk, they jump, now here, now there,
Their feet skim fast, they shout, they tear,
Your eyes can't fix them anywhere: —
The lacrosse team at play. . . .

These little lambs that we shall eat,
All emulous did straight compete,
They copied every lacrosse feat,
And skipped the self-same way.

From "A Vanished Sport,"
by W-ll--ms.

---

Cromesqui of Sweetbreads, a la Creme
Vol au Vent of Lobster, a la Maryland
Cutlets of Chicken, a la Victoria
Compote of Peaches, a la Conde

Sing a song of entrees,
Served in manner fine,
Just as Captain Winslow
Served New Haven's nine.
Cutlets made of Elis,
Flanked with compote sweet:
Wasn't that a dainty dish
For Eighty-five to eat?

From "Nursery Rhymes for '85,"
by Fr-nch.

"What is that, Alma Mater?" 'Tis punch, my child,
(And listen you will to my song)
Of aspect it seemeth both gentle and mild,
Roman Punch Of potence 'tis subtle and strong.
Oh, weird and wondrous the things it will do:
It turneth the juvenile head;
They say it is true those took of this brew
Who painted John Harvard so red.

From "Sunny Days in the South,"
by S-nf-rd.

---

They tell us that football's a game that's too tough,
And base-ball we no more can win it; Plover
But in discussing the game of plover and snipe, English Snipe
Eighty-five, they admit, is just "in it."

From "Railroad Problems," Volume Seven,
by B-ldw-n.

---

They serve us with sweets at the end of the feast:
Omelette Souffle In the Dinner of Life is this so?
Biscuit Glace The chorus of Benedicts all through the class
Fruit Jelly Start up from their seats with a "No!"

From "How to be Happy though Married,"
by Ch-nl-r.

---

Strawberries Now the grinds of our class, we are told,
Ice Cream Ragged their marks by a method quite bold;
Sherbet Frozen pudding and ices
Frozen Pudding They gulped down in slices,
And so got their subjects down cold.

Cheese Olives Coffee

From "Phi Beta Kappa Catechism,"
Edited by the "25."

---

A health to all, digestion, too,
(Since we no more can eat).
Will any dinner equal this,
Until again we meet?

Nutter was called upon for and responded with verses. The following men answered to toasts: Storrow, Sanford, S. E. Winslow, Trask, Simpkins, E. L. Thayer, Foss, Mumford, Chanler, J. H. Noble, Parker, Holland, and Codman; and Boyden was again compelled to render "Casey at the Bat." The song book was bound in imitation of an examination blue book. Henderson was again active in helping along the musical end of the feast, and Gorham, Boyden, Baldwin, and others led the singing.

The following day, June 26, 1895, Commencement Day, the class met at Hollis 23 for refreshment such as had been furnished the previous year under the new régime. The attendance was larger than usual, owing to the presence of a number of men from a distance who had come on for the dinner and to meet old friends. The secretary presided over a short business meeting, at which it was voted that a regular triennial dinner at the expense of the class fund be held on the evening before Commencement in 1897, and it was voted that an effort be made to increase the capital of the class fund to $6000, and that the secretary be authorized to send out an appeal to the class to accomplish that end. The number present during the day was forty-seven, and of these a large delegation went to the alumni dinner.

The vote of the class concerning the class fund is one which merits the attention of all. A glance at the statement of the treasurer, which follows, shows that at present the fund invested and in bank amounts to a trifle over $4000 only. It is only with the greatest economy, and by giving up certain features which would be valuable and interesting to the class, that those in charge of the fund and of the class expenses have been able to keep it where it is. The income is not sufficient to do properly what is expected of the fund, and throws additional and an uncalled-for burden upon the class officers in efforts at economy. There is no need of the magnificent funds of over $10,000, with which many of the classes have provided themselves, but the income of the sum set by this vote of the class in 1895, $6000, is not a cent too much to do economically the work of the class as it should be done, and to provide for it properly at its various gatherings. Owing to the continued depression in business no effort has been made as yet to follow up the action of the class by issuing any circulars or appeals, but it is hoped that a restoration of confidence after election will make it worth while to do so. Much of the extra sum needed would be quickly supplied by the payment of past subscriptions which have been neglected or overlooked.

THE CLASS ALBUM.

The committee on Class Album beg leave to submit the following report of their management of the trust confided to them : —

According to the responses made to the former chairman, Fisk, two hundred and more men were counted upon to take copies of the album when completed. Fisk first, and the whole committee afterwards, made a contract with the Forbes Lithographic Company for the printing of two hundred and twenty-five copies. Later arrangements were made with the same company to bind the albums in half and full leather, as ordered. The only other expenses so far incurred have been printing, postage, and two bills to Notman and Pach, the photographers, for needed photographs to complete the work.

As the payment for the albums has been very slow, it was necessary to borrow of a classmate the sum of $500, at four per cent, to pay off the Forbes Company. For this the committee are still indebted. Small further bills for binding, printing, and postage must also be incurred before the balance of the albums can be disposed of, and some expense must be incurred to restore to the College Library a class album to take the place of the one destroyed in preparing the album published by this committee.

Of the edition of two hundred and twenty-five, one hundred and sixty have been taken, leaving a balance of sixty-five still on hand. The committee being personally liable for all debts incurred, and having undertaken the same on the strength of the promised subscriptions of their classmates, would be pleased to be relieved of this liability by having the remaining members send and pay for the sixty-five albums which are left on our hands. The full leather albums are $8, half leather $6.75.

RESIDENCE.

The following table shows the changes in residence between 1885 and 1888, and again between 1888 and 1892. The latter columns contain names of several men who have received degrees as of 1885, but who were not included in the list of 1885, as they had not then graduated. The several deaths account for the decrease in the last column.

CLASS AND COLLEGE FUNDS.

I beg to submit my report of the class and college funds, covering the period since the last report. There has been no change in the class investments, except that the Atchison Railroad has defaulted interest on the $400 first-mortgage bond and the $30 of scrip held by the class. The treasurer does not feel responsible for the delinquency of the Atchison Railroad, as at the time this bond was bought the Atchison was paying and had been paying dividends on its stock for a number of years, and its bonds were in good standing; but the treasurer has been unwilling to discourage the generosity of the class and has paid interest on the bond since the last report, and at the beginning of the current year (as appears by the account submitted herewith) paid to the class the par value ($500) of the bond originally bought on account of the class. The Clinton Gas Light Company, to which reference was made in the last report, has resumed dividends, though not as yet at the original rate of eight per cent. The class has, however, been credited with dividends at the rate of eight per cent on the par value of its stock, which was the price at which the stock was bought. It will be remembered, as was stated in the Class Report, that the Clinton Gas Light Company is an old New England gas company which paid dividends at the rate of eight per cent for many years, though at the time of the last report, owing to expense incurred in connection with the purchase by the company of the electric-light plant in the town, it had been compelled to temporarily suspend dividends. If the company is not able to resume dividends at the full rate before the next report, the class treasurer will gladly take the stock at the full price paid by the class. It will be seen that the net result to the class of this last investment has been far from a loss, as the class has received continuously eight per cent on the $500 which it invested in the stock. It is perhaps well to close the explanation as to these two investments by pointing out that the profit made by the class in the stock of the old Chicago Stock Yards stock (now in part represented by the Stock Yards bond) has been very considerable; also that the value of the Lake Shore Railroad stock held by the class has increased materially, and the value of the C. B. & N. bonds slightly. The net result of all the class investments has resulted not in any loss of capital, but in a gain.
